

microbiologist

This is dr jana Schniete, who studies bacteria, evolution and how bacteria could be used to help our planet. She is trilingual, which means she speaks three languages

Marine biologist

This is dr caroline palmer. Caroline is a marine biologist who runs a charity which helps study coral reefs to learn how climate change is having an impact on them

Biomedical scientist

This is Hamied haroon, a biomedical scientist at the university of Manchester who was told at school to give up his plans to become a doctor! That Didn't stop him!

neuropsychologist

This is Anna Henschel, a phd student in glasgow who studies robots and how we communicate with them. She has a robot research assistant called nao who helps her to do this.

physicist

This is luke david, who is a physicist at university college London. He doesn't mind making mistakes as he knows this is important to help us learn.

immunologist

This is faith Uwadiae, who is an immunologist studying our immune system. She is a great example of how it is ok for you not to know what you want to in life. There is plenty of time to decide.

zoologist

This is robyn womack, a PhD student in zoology studying at the university of glasgow. She studies how birds sleep and spends lots of time outside and in the lab

Science communicator

This is sam Illingworth. He writes poetry and makes games that scientists can use to share their work with the public. He once beat a Japanese Olympic athlete in a 5km race entrepreneur

This is Lewis Hou, who plays in a ceilidh band and helps people who are not scientists to learn more about the things they are interested in geologist

This is Marli de Jongh, a PhD student in Glasgow who looks at how the stones we use to build historic buildings change over time.

microbiologist

This is dr Kirsty Robb, who looks at bacteria living in extreme environments. She can balance on one foot for a long time and her favourite food is mac n cheese

!

PHYSICIST

This is dr jess wade who is a physicist at imperial college London. Her favourite food is broccoli!

editor

This is dr Katherine Geoghegan, who is an editor for nature chemistry. She used to play the saxophone and loves pizza

physicist

This is Dr Lia Li, a physicist at university college London who uses lasers to measure how things move. She also spends time making robots that she says are often half-finished

ASTROPHYSICIST

This is Brynley Pearlstone, a PhD student in astrophysics studying at the university of glasgow. He loves marmite on spaghetti and was born with 71/2 fingers on his right hand

ASTRONOMER

This is dr tana joseph, an astronomer at university of Manchester. She enjoys going to the dentist and likes dancing